

The Sydney Bus Museum is a not-for-profit organisation first established in 1986.

We are a working museum with over 250 members who together help to preserve a rare and invaluable collection of historic buses dating from the 1920s to 1980s.

Our organisation has continued to exist for over 25 years thanks to our entirely voluntary workforce, who ensure our vehicles are regularly made available for various community and charitable events.

Sydney BUS MUSEUM

Our Collection

The Sydney Bus Museum houses Australia's largest collection of historic double-deckers, including those from Sydney, Adelaide and London. The collection consists of over 70 vehicles, ranges from primitive 1920s type buses through to 1940s and 50s Leylands and AECs, as well as the more modern 1980s Mercedes-Benz city buses.

We also house an extensive archive on Sydney's road transport history including signage, photographs and other key artefacts.

Active in the Community

The Sydney Bus Museum is regularly engaged by local councils, government organisations and community groups to operate vintage bus rides for various events in and around Sydney. Why not join us for a ride? Visit our website to find out more about upcoming events.

Join us

If you love what we do as much as we do, then why not consider joining? For just $90 per year you will receive our bi-monthly AustralianBus magazine and help contribute to maintaining our rare and invaluable collection of historic buses. To join simply visit our website or request a membership form.

We need your support

The Sydney Bus Museum is a not-for-profit registered charity with a 100% voluntary workforce. Why not consider supporting us with a donation? Donation boxes are located on-board all our buses, or you can donate online using credit card or PayPal through our website. All donations are tax-deductable.

Visit us

The Sydney Bus Museum is located within the restored Leichhardt Tramsheds in Sydney's inner-west. Check our website or call for visiting hours.

School and community group tour bookings also available.
